Gray's Patent Molded Collars,

Are universally pronounced the neatest and best fitting collars extant. The upper edge presents a perfect curve, free from the angles noticed in all other collars. The cravat causes no puckers on the inside of the turn-down collar; they are as SMOOTH INSIDE AS OUTSIDE, and therefore Perfectly free and casy to the neck. The Garotte Collar has a smooth and evenly fintabed edge on both sides.

These Collars are not simply flat pieces of paper ent in the ferm of a collar, but are MOLDED AND SHAPED TO FIT THE NECK.

They are made in "Novelty," (or turn-down style;) in every half size from 12 to 17 inches, and in "Bureks," (or Garotte,) frem 13 to 17 inches; and packed in "solid sixes" in next blue cartons, con-aining 100 each; also in smaller ones of ten each—the latter a very handy package for travelers

Mine Exploded by our Forces-A Terrific Spectacle-The Works Lifted into the Air-Men and Guns Buried in Ruins-Great Artillery and Musketry Fire-Reb. el Works Assaulted-The Entire First Line Carried-Enemy Completely Surprised-Great Slaughter of the Rebels-Many Prisoners Captured-Movement on the James River.

FORTRESS MONROE, July 30 .- The mail steamer from City Point has just arrived with important news from Gen Grant's army. The siege of Petersburg opened in earnest this morning. At daylight we sprang the mine and blew up one of their principal batteries in from of Petersburg, containing sixteen gans, and subsequently carried the outer line of Works by assault.

Later. FORTRESS MONROE, July 30, p. m.—Just as the boat is about leaving for Baltimore your correspondent gathers the following additional particulars:

The explosion took place shortly after four o'clock this morning. It was terrific, and destroyed one of the enemy's strongest fortifications, which, as before stated, contained sixteen guns. The work was rendered a mass of ruins.

Immediately after the explosion the artillery opened with one simultaneous and continuous roar along the entire line of our army. Up to the leaving of the mail boat at 10 o'clock a. m., two other earthworks had been carried, and also the enemy's entire outer line of en-trenchments, and the battle was progressing with great fury.

From Another Associated Press Corres-WASHINGTON, July 31.—Information from headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, dated yesterday, says:—The great event so long anticipated, viz., the explosion of the mine under the enemy's fort in front of the Ninth Army Corps, came off this morning at Picket firing has been kept up all night, and in fact, at the time the match was applied, the skirmishers were still engaged on both sides.

The volume of dirt thrown up was immense, rising over 300 feet into the air, resembling an immense fountain of dirty water more than anything else. The 9th corps at once charged the works, driving the enemy to their second line and taking a number of prisoners, some of whom were dug out of the dirt badly bruised.

These prisoners state that only about a dozen of their regiment remain out of the entire number. It was a South Carolina regiment. As soon as the explosion took place one hundred and twenty guns were opened on the enemy along our front, while the musketry blazed in one continuous line of fire along the front of the 9th and parts of the 5th and 18th corps. The scene was one long to be remem-bered by all who witnessed it. But the smoke from the guns soon obscured the view, and the first particulars of the success was gleaned from those who came in with the prisoners.

The prisoners say that most of those in the fort were asleep at the time of the explosion. They state that there were sixteen guns in the fortification, which of course were buried far One prisoner states that they were actively engaged mining under our works, and that in two days more they would have been ready to blow us up, but we got the start of them. It is hoped here that long ere this despatch reaches you Petersburg will be in our posses-

The Latest. A later despatch, dated 7 a. m , says:-Reports just in say that we have possession of the entire first line of the enemy's works, with a large number of prisoners.

Our loss in the charge was, of course, severe, as our men had to cross an open field to reach the rebel lines. The troops engaged were the 9th corps, with the 18th supporting them. The 2d and 5th

The Operations North of the James River. New York, July 31 .- The Herald's correspondent north of the James river, under date of near Deep Bottom, July 28, says, prisoners report that when it was discovered that the 2d corps was north of the Jame river, the enemy immediately commenced pouring in reinforce ments, both from Petersburg and near Richmond. General Lee was taken entirely by surprise, and was obliged to use the utmost dispatch to rush troops to the threatened points.

During last night the enemy continued to strengthen the naturally strong position he held, which, in the morning, were found, together with the strong reinforcements he had received, too strong to assail. All the roads to Richmond, between the James river and White Oak Swamp, were strongly detended also. Last evening Merritt's brigade of cavalry drove Hampton's rebel cavalry from an important point on the Central road, which he held until 10 o'clock pext day, when the rebels came out with three brigades of infantry, making a steady assault upon Merritt's force who had dismounted. Failing back in good order to their reserve brigade, both delivered a destructive volley and then charged, when the rebels broke and fled in confusion, leaving their dead and wounded on the field.

At the same time Gen. Gregg's division became engaged at another point, with a superier force, and the fighting became very severe. Dawes' brigade receiving the largest share, he was obliged to yield a portion of the ground and lost one gun, but he soon railted, checked the advance of the rebels, and finally drove them back.

Gen. Kautz took possession of Malvern Hill, which had been abandoned by the rebels to protect one of the Richmond roads. Gen. Gibbons, after the repulse of the rebels, relieved the cavalry with his infantry, skirmishing with the enemy, and at night took up a posi-

The Herald's 18th corps correspondent of the 29th says: An election was held day before yesterday among the North Carolina troops, and, notwithstanding the intimidations of the rebel leaders, nearly half of the votes cast were for Holden for Governor against Governor Vance. The Assault upon Petersburg, and Blowing Up of the Rebel Fortifications. INTERESTING DETAILS

[Correspondence Philadelphia Inquirer.]

BEFORE PETERSBURG, July 30, 5% a.m., by Telegraph.—The long looked for, long prepared for and all important movement has arrived. The great ball has opened, and as I pen these lines, while the grey and waning dawn is merging into the broad daylight, hundreds of cleans of Grant's artillery are helphing forth a pieces of Grant s artillery are belohing forth a perfect shower of shot and shell into the Rebel fortifications that interpose a barrier between our force and Petersburg, and ere the setting of the sun to-day the problem as to whether that Rebel stronghold shall still remain in the poesession of the enemy, or become subservient to "Yankee sway," will in all human probability be solved.

It has been known for some time past that

It has been known for some time past that our sappers and miners have been actively engaged in mining the Rebel fortifications at two or three points, the most extensive of which were directly opposite General Burnside's (the Ninth Corps') entrenchments. Excavations have been dug beneath these works some twenty-five feet below the surface, and several tons of powder were stored there in barrels.

The work has been an exceedingly laborious one and was performed by (principally) Pennsylvania miners belonging to a regiment from that State.

The trap was set, the string in hand, and it required but the order of the commanding general to destroy in one moment the result of weeks of Ri bel labor as well as every living thing in and around and furnish an entering wedge for our forces to push their way into mediate associates, it is doub'ful if any one in the army had the least idea when this mine would be sprung, or the grand attack would be made. No one seemed to anticipate any movemen, and Gen. Grant's usual reticence came into play The only circumstance that attracted any attention or excited the least suspicion, was the fact that on Thursday afternoon Gen. Butler was visited by Gens. Grant and Meade, and a prolonged interview and consultation was the result, which lasted long after night Another noticeable circumstance consisted in the fact that all the ambulances at City Point and other places were sent to the front We all looked forward to an indefinite period of inaction, when on Friday night the followirg order was sent to the headquarters of the different corps, division, and regimental com-"SIR :-- You will cause your command to be in readiness to march to-morrow morning at three o'clock, with forty rounds of ball cartridge. None but commissary-sergeants will be permitted to remain in camp.' The interpretation of the above was an easy matter. It meant fight, and the night was spent throughout in busy preparation for the conflict that all knew would take place in the morning. It was arranged that Burnside's corps should open the ball by applying the match to the fuse that lead to the muse under the rebel earthworks. Immediately after which the entire line of batteries should open fire for the purpose of demolishing, is possible, the other rebel redoubts, and through the opening made by the explosion the colored troops in Burnside's corps should first charge, and the entire infantry te massed close at hand, ready to make a general assault at any moment. This programme is being faithfully carried out. At three o'clock punctually everybody was on the qui vive, and it then became known for the first that a mine was to be exploded

Speculation was rife as to the effect that would be produced by the ignition under ground of such a vast quantity of powder. An anxious suspense ensued, which lasted until fifteen minutes before five o'clock, when a loud noise was heard, and a dense volume of earth, of a rich nut-brown color, was thrown about one bundred feet in the air, when it seemed to hang for a moment in the air, then converting itself into a volume of lava, fell into and around the cavity it had been forced from like a fountain According to the programme, a terrific artillery fire broke forth, which shook the ground around. Burnside's batteries were the first to open fire. Warren's Fifth Corps pieces then spoke, followed by the guns of Baldy Smith's now Ord's Eighteenth Corps.

The noise was deafening. The rebel batteries replied vigorously, and by a little after six o'clock, the entire line on either side was enveloped in a cloud of smoke. An immense number of shells burst in all directions, many of them high in the air, a flash of light and a large ball of white smoke indicating the places whence they exploded. The rebels seem to have been taken com-

but lost no time in getting "their house in or-It will be remembered that Hancock's corps, the Second, left the front on Wednesday night and after crossing the James, above Bermuda Hundred, met with a rebel force at Malvern Hill, captured four pieces of artillery taken from our forces some time since, and quite a number of prisoners. It was thought by the uninitiated that important results might transpire from a detachment of Hancock's Corps from the army and its recrossing of the James River, particularly as it left shortly after Sheridan's cavalry had gone over the same road.

movement which caused so much speculation was simply a diversion to bamboozle the enemy; for after making the capture spoken of, and after a considerable rebel force had been despatched from before Petersburg to watch Hancock's movements, thus greatly weakening their lines, that General quietly slipped back to the Army of the Potomac. I understand that Anderson's and Heath's divisions were detached from before Peters-burg and sent to Richmond to look after Haucock, leaving A. P. Hill's corps within the defenses at Petersburg. Nothing can exceed the enthusiasm of the men. The whole line of artillery, comprising, prehably, two hundred guns, are constantly sending forth a sheet of flame, with the accompaniment of shot, shell, etc.; and the huze mortars, recently placed in position at dif-ferent points, are despatching their terrible missiles of destruction into the devoted rebel works. The assault thus far has been confined along Burnside's line. That is the saltent point. The main portion of the infantry of the different corps are massed in his immediate rear, and but enough left of them along the line of batteries to support the same in case of an emergency.

So incessant has been the artillery firing that but little can be seen between the respective of posing forces in consequence of the dense smoke. At the present time, seven o'clock, the firing has some what moderated, and the wounded are being brought to the rear. From the number ing, I am of epinion that the loss on both sides will be heavy. Later News. QUARTER BEFORE EIGHT O'CLOCK .- The cannonading, although not by any means discontinued, is not as heavy as a half hour ago, but the rapid and heretotore almost deafening already arrived, after so short a period of fight-discharge of musketry indicates that a vigorous assault is in progress. Except at the first day's fight in the battle of the Wilderness, I have never witnessed more rapid or destructive discharges of small arms. It mainly proceeds from the direction of Burnside's line, and although the smoke hides much of the scene, I doubt not that the rebels experience with Roderick Dhu, if they have any manhood in them, "the stern joy which war-riors feel in foemen worthy of their steel."

EIGHT O'CLOCK A. M .- The artillery has again broken out with redoubled fury. A second does not elapse between each discharge of the heavy field pieces. It is mainly from the lett, and a spirited reply is elicited from the rebels. HALF-PAST EIGHT A. M .- Gen. Sheridan's entire cavalry corps can now be seen slowly but steadily winding their way to the front from the direction of City Point. The long line of raiders, reaching over several miles of ground, present a most imposing spectacle as they advance with the peculiar abandon peculiar to our cavalry to take a position, ready at a moments notice to pounce upon the enemy when the opportune moment shall arrive. Accompanying them are several batteries of flying artillery, which will shortly be engaged

THE INVASION OF PENNSYLVANIA. The Town of Chambersburg Destroyed Cruel and Appuliting Scene...4,000 Peo-ple & susciens... Barbarity of the Rebelo-Averill Pursuing the Enemy... The Raid ers Retrenting West... HARRISBURG, July 30, 5 p. m... In an address to the citizens this afternoon, calling upon them to respond, the Governor read a despatch from Shippensburg to the effect that the rebel pickets are two and a half miles this side of Chambersburg, and the rebels in Chambersburg had burned Col. McClure's residence, the court house, the bank, and all the public buildings and warehouses.

Gen. Cameron addressed the meeting, being londly called for. He said that if the rebels come to Harrisburg we must expect the same treatment. He reported from the committee of safe'y a number of places for the different companies to report, and said they would be sup-plied with ratione, &c., and would not be taken from Harrieburg. Some tifteen companies re-ported for duty at the meeting; others are in process of formation.

HARRISHURG, July 30 —The censorship having been revived by the military authorities at this post, much news that would be interesting and important to the public, cannot be communicated by telegraph. This caution on the part of the military authorities must not be miscontant because it is insuffed by circumstances. strued, because it is justified by circumstances surrounding the situation in the Cumberland Valley, and made necessary by the highest regard for public safety and the military success. There can be no doubt that the main object of the present rebel invasion has been already thy ar ed, and bat the rebels themselves will be ket t exceedingly busy to extricate themselves from the position into which their rash-ness led them. Nine o'clock p. m .- Colonel McClure has just received a dispatch from the operator in the field, a few miles this side of Chambersburg, to the effect that the rebels had fired that town. After having perpetrated their fiendish act, the result of the rage and disappointment of the rebels in having been foiled in their hopes of gathering an immense amount of plunder, they left with increased celerity, in comparison to that with which they entered that ill fated town this morning, and that they are now bastily collecting their maranding forces for consolidation in retreating, instead of rendering themselves more successful in their aggressions.

The military authorities here are active and vigilant. Major General Couch thoroughly comprehends the situation, and will certainly use the means at his disposal for the most effective and prompt defence of the people and property within this district.
All the public buildings in Chambersburg and Colonel McClure's residence and barn were fired by the tebels and burned. The greater part of the town is a smouldering mass of ruins. General Averill Attacks the Raiders. LANCASTER. July 30, 11 D'clock P. M .- The following information is derived from semi-official quarters General Averill has driven the rebel forces, under the command of Johnson and McCauslin, out of Chambersburg, and is following them westward towards Loudon, in Franklin county.

Most of Chambersburg is said to be in ashes, and three thousand people thereby rendered houseless. A raid towards Wheeling is intended by Breckinridge, who relies upon returning by the way of the Kanawah Valley. In the meantime, Longstreet is to threaten Washington, while General Early holds the Valley.

Our military authorities are in possession of these facts, and the attempts of the raiders will, no doubt, be effectually defeated. HARRISBURG, July 30 -Most positive information has been received that General Averill has driven the Rebeis out of Chambersburg, and is following them westward toward Loudon, Franklin county. The best part of Chambersburg is said to be in ashes, and three thousand people rendered homeless. It is stated on the authority of prisoners that Breckinridge is making a raid towards Wheeling or above, to return via the Kanawha Valley. It seems by the statement of these prisoners, that it is the intention of Longstreet to threaten Washington, while Breckinridge makes his raid. In the meantime, Early is holding the Valley.

Further Particulars HARRISBURG, July 31.—General McCaus-land was in command of the rebel troops when they burned Chambersburg He is a desperate and ferocious treebooter, ready at any time to votate the usages of honorable warfare, in order to gratify his dark and malignant passions. After he had taken formal po-session of the town he made a proclamation demanding $100,000 in gold. It was, of course, impossible to comply with such a demand-a demand, no doubt, made in confident expectation of its failure, and as sure of its affording a pretext to execute the premeditated plan for destroying Chambersburg. The valuable portion of the merchandize having been removed, added to the rage and disappointment of the rebels, and when thus inspired, the order was issued to fire the court-house, the town hall, and bank buildings. A strong breeze prevailing, communicated the flames to the surrounding buildings, and parties of soldiery having sacked several drug and chemical stores, had manufactured a quantity of turpentine balts, which they ignited and threw in all directions, thus creating as many different fires in different localities, which soon united in one general

Speedily the scene became heart-rending and most appalling. The crackling and roaring of the flames as they leaped from house to house, the shricks of terrified women, and panic stricken and suffering children; pitiful appeals of the old and helpless were heard above the noise of the conflagration, but all to no avail. The citizens bad, without protesting, submitted to the plundering of the stores, and only appealed to the mercy of the foe, but nothing could appease the butcher and incendiary, McCausland. Two hundred and sixty five of the most valuable and prominent public and private buildings were destroyed. They fired the town, as near as can now be ascertained, at 11 o'clock a. m., and remained just long enough to see the flames spread and get proper headway, when the alarm was given that Averill was approaching the town. Instantly every freebooter was in the saddle, and took the road hurriedly to St. Thomas, with Gen. Averill in pursuit. No intelligence has reached the city concerning the direct effect of Averill's attack. It is believed, however, that be succeeded in punishing McCausland very severely. A train heavily laden with commissary stores was despatched from this city this morning for the vicinity of Chambersburg, in order to relieve the present wants of the houseless women and children of that town, who now crowd the woods and fields of the

The Pursuit of the Raiders. When Gen. Averill reached Chambersburg the flames had obtained a such a head way as to render it impossible for his men to stay there. The word "onward" ran along his lines, and the rebels hurried over the St. Thomas road toward McConnellsburg, but the rear of their retreating column could not fail to distinguish the approach of Averill, so they were prevented from doing any deeds of violence. Averill came thundering after them, entering at one side of McConnellsburg while the invaders left at the other. Reported Detent of the Raiders. PHILADELPHIA, July 31.—It is reported here that Gen. Averill has defeated the raiders at
